SUBJECT:

REF :

DATE: 8 January 1962

1. Following a request from headquarters on 21 Dec 61, arrangements were made to interview [redacted] at his home on Saturday, the 23rd. This was the first date [redacted] had open.

25X1

2. [redacted] former director and owner of the [redacted] in Havana, Cuba was arrested on 19 April 61. He was held at G-2 headquarters for one month, intensively interrogated and then transferred to La Habana. There he was held until 5 Sept 61, although no formal charges were lodged against him.

25X1

3. Within two days after his arrest, and after G-2 officers had thoroughly searched and ransacked the records of his [redacted] he was requested to write out a detailed personal biography. This marked the beginning of a searching inquiry into his personal life. He was subjected to questioning for periods as long as twelve hours (1500 to 0300) in a soundproof, air-conditioned room behind the offices of G-2 headquarters. During these periods the interrogator sat at a desk which contained a hidden tape-recorder.

25X1

4. The theme of the interrogation always seemed to center on the notion that [redacted] was a US intelligence officer with ties to the FBI rather than to CIA. [redacted] was a long time employee of the US Federal government before his association with the [redacted] organization and his interrogators pressed this line hard. They told him it was quite logical and understandable that after such long service he would continue an "unofficial" relationship with the government and they tried to get him to uncover his local "network" (which he didn't have) and to reveal his communications technique for transmitting intelligence reports to his US "headquarters". ([redacted] was certain that non-Cubans were behind the analysis of the interrogation)

5. [redacted] offers the following explanation as a possible background for this persistent line of questioning:

In March 1961, [redacted] made an emergency visit to the US. While he was here he discussed with the President of [redacted] the fact that a pro-Castro situation was developing among his teachers in Havana. At the President's suggestion he, [redacted] called on the FBI and talked over the matter with an agent who had previously indicated curiosity over the political make-up of the [redacted] teaching staff in Cuba. [redacted] opines that his visit to the FBI at that time may have become known to the Cuban government. For example, his Cuban interrogators were particularly interested in the names and records of the teaching staff and wanted to know how each teacher felt about the Castro regime.

6. When [redacted] was transferred to La Cabana he found only one other US citizen there, a retired US army officer named [redacted] believed to be from Miami, Fla., went to Cuba in [redacted] 1960, for business reasons and was picked up at the airport in Havana on arrival. He was held incommunicado for 14 months at El Principe and is now serving a 14 year sentence at La Cabana on charges of being the head of the "White Rose" anti-Castro organization. [redacted] is desperately ill with kidney and liver ailments and receives no medical care. His physical condition has kept him from being transferred to the Isle of Pines.

7. [redacted] also heard, through the prison grapevine, that 16 US prisoners are languishing on the Isle of Pines. He was unable to develop any details bearing upon them.

8. Following his release on 5 Sept 61, [redacted] took refuge in the Swiss Embassy and remained there until his departure from Cuba in October 1961. He noted that he experienced a deep sense of insecurity during his sojourn at the Embassy and felt that he and others there could have been kidnapped by the Cubans had they so desired.

Dear Pres:

I have now received a report on [redacted] and find that Mr. [redacted] was arrested on 19 April 1961 in Havana and placed in the La Cabana Fortress, where he stayed until his release on 5 September 1961. Information received from other sources in the Fortress reveal that Mr. [redacted] was interrogated under glaring lights but was not physically mistreated otherwise. A source reported that while undergoing interrogation under these lights, Mr. [redacted] stated that he worked for U. S. Army Intelligence and the FBI.

Dear John:

We are heartbroken and we know that you are. Dottie and I could hardly believe the tragic news about Rosemary.

I hasten to send you assurances of my deepest sympathy and full understanding of your feelings at this time.

This morning Dottie and I were talking, and thought how nice it would be for us if you could join us at Hobe Sound, Florida on January 1st and spend at least a few days, perhaps a week there. Phyllis and Doug Dillon have placed at our disposal their little cottage on the beach, secluded from everything and thoroughly private.

We can think of nothing that would give us more pleasure than having you there with us during that week. We return to Washington on January 8.

You need not hurry your decision on this matter. We shall not invite anyone else even if you should decline. Just tuck it away in the back of your mind and remember that it would give us much pleasure to enjoy the warmth of our friendship with you during that first week in January.

You can advise Mrs. Hampton in my Washington office when you get around to it, and she will notify us. We will be travelling a bit beginning December 19th, but she can reach us all the time.

Again, my dear John, let me say that I can hardly express our deep sense of loss. We feel so closely drawn to you by this tragic event.

With affectionate regard always, I am

Honorable John A. McCone

Dear Mr. Scherer:

Thank you for your recent letter concerning Commander [REDACTED]. Our Director of Personnel has written to Commander [REDACTED] and I am enclosing a copy of that letter for your information.

Commander [REDACTED] was in touch with us in August 1960. His background and experience were reviewed with interest by our people but we did not have an opening in a suitable position for him. I have asked our Director of Personnel to bring his resume to the attention of appropriate operating officials to determine if there is some possibility of our taking advantage of his offer of his services.

Your interest in writing to me about Commander [REDACTED] is appreciated and we shall advise you of the outcome of our review.

Dear Mr. McCone:

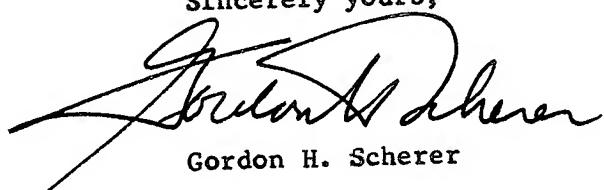

There was a news article in last Sunday's issue of the Cincinnati Enquirer with reference to the resignation as of January 31st of General C. P. Cabell as Deputy Director of the CIA.

This article was seen by Commander [redacted]
[redacted], who thought some reorganization may be taking place. Commander [redacted] is one of the outstanding citizens of Cincinnati, whom I've had the pleasure of knowing for many years. He has completed his business career. Because he is a dedicated American patriot, he is vitally interested in helping his country in some capacity for which his training and experience qualifies him. I realize his age is against him. He is not particularly interested in the amount of salary. I was wondering whether there was any capacity in which he can be used. I am enclosing a background resume.
